Headline:

Thursday somewhat less cold but rather cloudy. Windy in north.

This Evening and Tonight:

Southern and eastern areas seeing early frost before clouding over. Rain over Northern Ireland spreading east across many northern and central areas, focused over western hills, with little in the northeast. Some snow affecting high ground and the Northern Isles.

Thursday:

A band of rain sinks south across northern areas, with gales in places, perhaps severe in far north overnight. Further south, rather cloudy with a few light showers. Less cold.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:

Turning cold across all areas. Cloudy across the south into the weekend with outbreaks of rain, clearing early on Sunday. Otherwise a mixture of sunny spells and wintry showers.
